Souvenirs at St.Andrew's Descent

Andriyivsky Descent, popularly known as the Montmartre of Kyiv, is one of the most ancient streets in the Ukrainian capital. It charms with its legendary history, inimitable colors, and unique architectural ensemble. Because of its atmosphere, it successfully competes in popularity with Kyiv's main street - Khreshchatyk.

Today, as many years ago, a bohemian atmosphere reigns here. The numerous artistic salons, galleries, and art-cafes on the street reinforce this aura. Kyiv's Montmartre is always full of artists and craftsmen selling pictures, decorations, glass and ceramic objects, as well as souvenirs.

Details: It's spontaneous, not regulated, market at St.Andrew's descent: people just go there with their handicrafts + some sellers have constant tables (not shops) with different souvenirs. So it doesn't have official open hours. Usually Saturday and Sunday + holidays are most active days there. Monday is most empty day. Other days are not-predictable. It's open-air, so in case of bad weather there are much less sellers.
